Sustainable Design & Energy Management Using Addressable Lighting Controls

Lighting Control can be performed in many different ways. One of the methods gaining notice in our industry is Addressable Lighting Controls.

We have the pleasure of having Lighting Dynamics Inc. sponsoring our May Program entitled "Sustainable Design & Energy Management Using Addressable Lighting Controls" presented by Rick Schuett of Encelium Technologies. Rick is currently the VP of Global Sales for Encelium Technologies which is a global leader in lighting control solutions for smart buildings. Rick has a BSME from Rensselaer with a concentration in Energy Systems.

The program is AIA accredited presentation which defines how Addressable Lighting Controls reduce carbon footprint while aiding in the design of energy efficient buildings. The program will also identify energy management strategies and their effect on energy efficiency and economic value while enhancing health, safety and welfare of the building occupants. As a by-product there are other economic benefits that will be included in the presentation.

Knowledge of the latest lighting control methods is a benefit to both the designer and the owner to understand when specifying or recommending a lighting control system. Join us for the May IES Program and see what is new in Addressable Lighting Controls.

President's Report

We have many excellent lighting projects in the Cleveland Area, but seldom are the local designers given the opportunity to talk about their projects. On April 14, we had A Tale of Two Lighting Projects which highlighted the lighting talent of Marian Perez from Karpinski Engineering for The Cleveland State Center and Ardra Zinkon from Tec Inc Engineering & Design for her design of the Rice Branch of the Cleveland Public Library. We would like to thank Marian and Ardra for sharing their projects with us.

We have the pleasure of having Lighting Dynamics Inc. sponsoring our May program with Rick Schuett from Encelium Technologies. Rick will give us an update presentation on Sustainable Design & Energy Management Using Addressable Lighting Controls. This is an AIA presentation which will show the benefits of using addressable lighting controls. Knowledge of the latest control methods is a benefit to both the designer and the owner to understand when specifying or recommending a lighting control system. Join us for the May IES Program and see what is new in addressable lighting controls.

Spring is here and it is time to sponsor or register for the annual IES Cleveland Section Golf Outing in June. The proceeds from the event are for the CTS Student Scholarship presented in May and to support your local Cleveland IES Section. So chase the spiders out of your golf bag and dust off your clubs for a fun day in June. See page 4 of this Lumen Press for details and sponsorship opportunities.
